Subject Headings and Call Number Areas

The titles listed below are far from being an exhaustive list of all the print materials available to you through the Nyack College and ATS Libraries. If you are interested in finding other materials on Business, Economics, and Accounting, you may want to search the Library's online catalog. One way to search for materials is by subject heading. In the upper left corner of the Nyack College Libraries webpage, you will see a box where you can enter a search in the "Library Catalog Search" box. To specifically search for a subject heading, select Subject Heading from the pull down menu under the search box. Here are a few possibilities for you to search:

- Accounting
- Commercial Law – United States
- Economics
- Management
- Marketing
- Personnel Management

Another effective way of searching for print materials is browsing the Library's stacks for books on your topic area. The following list of call numbers might get you started in the right area:

Library Print Resources Journals and Newspapers

With the addition of full-text article databases to the current library holdings, the number of available journals and newspapers has increased dramatically. Over 20,200 journal and newspaper titles are now available through both print and online formats. The titles that are physically owned by the Nyack College Libraries can be found in their respective reference areas. These are available to use only within the library and cannot be checked out for further use. To search all journal and newspaper titles available to students, faculty and staff of Nyack College and ATS, follow the link to the Nyack College Electronic Journals Database provided by Serials Solutions. Once in this database, you can search by title or international standard serials number (ISSN), subject, or browse titles alphabetically. Once you have completed a search, you will be given the location (which database or library) of the journal or newspaper and what years are available.

Below are some helpful searching tips for searching the Electronic Journals Database. Please note that searching this database will only provide titles of what is available to you. It will not search journal content. You will need then search the full-text and citation databases to find specific articles.

To search by Title or ISSN:

- Title begins with: Enter 2 or more letters of the beginning of the title. The more letters you enter, the more specific your search becomes. The search engine ignores initial articles (the, a, an, etc.). No wildcards or truncation characters are needed to search.
- Title equals: Enter the exact title. The search engine ignores initial articles (the, a, an, etc.). No wildcards or truncation characters are needed to search.
- ISSN equals: Enter the exact ISSN (0000-0000) with or without a hyphen. Please note that while print or electronic ISSNs are accepted, not all titles have been assigned a print or electronic ISSN.
- Title contains all words: Enter one or more title words in any order. This search will match titles that contain all words. You can use an asterisk (*) to find partial words (e.g. statistic*).
